The Brazilian Mining Association (IBRAM)

IBRAM is a private and non-profit organization, which acts to strengthen relations between mining companies and the various audiences, as a link of connection of the sector, directly benefiting professionals and suppliers, the government and society.

Considered the spokesperson for the mining industry, IBRAM encourages innovation, disseminates knowledge and promotes and disseminates good practices and articulates business and development opportunities for the mining industry, through various initiatives.

Among them are the events that are already part of the annual calendar of mining players. With innovative and relevant agendas, renowned experts, a qualified audience and opinion-makers, and the presence of major brands, they are a unique business opportunity.

Currently, IBRAM has more than 140 associates, representing 85% of Brazil's mineral production, made up of mining companies, trade associations, mineral engineering, environmental, geology companies, equipment manufacturers, technology centers and investment banks.
